SO YOU WANT TO BE A MILLIONAIRE?

NFCC Announces Annual National Financial Literacy Poster Contest

Silver Spring, MD – Every young boy and girl wants to be a millionaire when they grow up, but just how might they go about getting from point A to point B? The National Foundation for Credit Counseling (NFCC) is providing students with the opportunity to contemplate that thought and express it through art.

In an effort to spread lessons in financial literacy to our nation's youth, the NFCC is once again sponsoring the Be Money Wi$e National Financial Literacy Poster Contest for 2009. The contest is designed to get young students thinking about how to manage money effectively and offers them a creative outlet to demonstrate their knowledge. It also offers the opportunity for local and national recognition for student artwork and rewards winners with U.S. savings bonds and other prizes.

“Teachers have found this to be a creative way to introduce their students to the concept of financial literacy. With the new semester starting, now is the time to incorporate the contest into the lesson plans,” said Gail Cunningham, spokesperson for the NFCC. “The idea has been widely embraced, with thousands of posters submitted over the past few years.”

The theme of the NFCC's 2009 Be Money Wise Poster Contest is “I'm going to be a millionaire because I...” All school-aged children in grades 3-12 are eligible to enter with local and national winners to be chosen from each of three grade categories. Students from public or private schools may enter the contest, as well as home-schooled children or those in after-school programs.

Entries will be judged on expression of the theme, artistic style, and creativity, and must be submitted to an NFCC Member Agency for judging. The submission deadline for poster entries is in February 2009, with specific deadlines varying by NFCC Member Agency.

Local winners become National Finalists, as submitted by each NFCC Member Agency. National Finalists will be placed in contention for three national awards, one per grade category, by a panel of judges representing academia, the media and government. An overall National Winner will also be chosen from the three category winners.

All National Finalists will receive a commemorative t-shirt, and each national grade category winner will receive an award plaque and a $100 savings bond. In addition to these prizes, the National Winner will be given an all-expense paid trip to Washington, DC with a parent or guardian and will be given official recognition in April as part of Financial Literacy Month on Capitol Hill.

The 2008 National Winner was 8th grader Harrison Noh of Bloomfield Hills, Michigan.

To become involved, teachers, parents, and/or students are encouraged to visit the Web site created specifically for this contest, www.MoneyWisePosterContest.org, where they can find more detailed information, including contest rules, entry forms, and where to submit poster entries.

National organizations have joined the NFCC to support and promote this youth financial literacy initiative. They include: American Bankers Association Education Foundation, Jump$tart Coalition for Personal Financial Literacy, Junior Achievement USA, and National Education Association Member Benefits.
